OUR PHILOSOPHY
The formula matters.
So does understanding it.
Skincare should be easier to navigate. We put ingredients, their concentrations, and how to use them at the centre of every product story.
No complicated rituals. No miracle promises. Just clear information for a more informed routine.

How should I introduce a new active?
Patch test first. Introduce one new product at a time, at a low frequency, and watch how your skin responds. Stop use if irritation persists.
Can I use every serum in the same routine?
Do I still need sunscreen when using an acid?

BEFORE YOU LAYER

More actives ≠ better care.

A focused routine leaves room to understand what works for your skin. Start with one new active at a time.

Exfoliation needs a slow start

Read the layering guide

Patch test. Introduce gradually. Use broad-spectrum sunscreen each morning.

Mornings stay simple.
Cleanse as needed, moisturise, then apply broad-spectrum SPF. Sun protection is an everyday step.
Your existing SPF is not included in this bag.

This ingredient check is educational, not a diagnosis or a guarantee of tolerance. Patch test each new product. For persistent irritation or a skin condition, consult a qualified clinician.

A slow start is still progress.

Illustrative first-week evening plan. Adjust to your skin, not a deadline.

Begin with patch testing before this schedule. Skip treatment nights if your skin feels dry, sore, or irritated.

Build with a little patience.

Your routine should be comfortable, repeatable, and easy to understand.

Does compatible mean irritation-free? −
No. Ingredient combinations are only one part of tolerance. Concentration, frequency, your skin condition, and the complete formula all matter. Introduce one new product at a time.
